ALCONIX CORPORATION today announced that it has entered into a real estate sales agreement with the seller to acquire land (non-current assets) for the purpose of constructing a recycling facility of its group company. Details are described below.

1. Reason for the acquisition

ALCONIX operates a recycling business, focusing primarily on aluminum, copper and other non-ferrous metals, as one of its key business areas in the trading segment. In this business, ALCONIX has identified “recycling-oriented society” as a business solution that leverages its functional and technological strengths in the business strategy of the Long-term Management Plan 2030. To promote its group action plan, “realize a recycling-oriented society by expanding recycling centers and rolling them out nationwide,” ALCONIX has decided to acquire land (non-current assets) for establishing and expanding the bases of group companies engaged in non-ferrous metal recycling.

ALCONIX will take this opportunity to promote the construction and expansion of comprehensive recycling centers across the group. The goal is to realize a recycling-oriented society, which is gaining momentum in Japan and abroad. ALCONIX also aims to reduce its environmental impact through business activities.
